Pearl River, La.-resident Mamie Mitchell at a candlelight vigil Tuesday night for her son Mark who died Jan. 23, 2000. Authorities say evidence leads them to believe Mark was killed while riding his bicycle on Lakeshore Rd. in a tragic hit-and-run accident. Mark's family feels he was murdered by bullies who had harassed him because of his manner of dress.

Family calls for action in year-old death of teen son

A year after what police say was a hit-and-run accident, Mamie Mitchell, mother of 18-year-old victim Mark Mitchell, said she still has questions concerning the circumstances of her son's death.

Mark was killed last Jan. 23, while riding his bicycle along Lakeshore Rd., south of Lower Bay Rd. The Pearl River teen was spending time in the area with his aunt to help on a home-improvement project. A police report said he was struck by a vehicle that fled the scene.

No arrests have been made in the case.

Mitchell said on Monday she is not satisfied with the way the investigation has been handled by the Hancock County Sheriff's Department, and would like to see an independent investigation done by another public or private agency.

"The sheriff's department wasted three months waiting for a drug report to come back on my son, even though I told them that my son was not a drug user — they thought that his death might be a drug related crime — but the report came back clean, I knew my son, and I knew he did not do drugs," said Mitchell.

Mitchell said she feels that her son was the victim of harassment that turned deadly, not just a random accident.

"Mark liked to look different, dye his hair, wear baggy pants and wear an ear ring in his eyebrow, and he had complained to me that he was being harassed for his appearance," said Mitchell. "I wanted to report the incidents, but Mark thought that would just aggravate the situation ... now I feel that the situation may have been more serious than any of us realized."

Supers take no action on proposed tourism tax

Carriere fears for future of agency without additional source of funding

BY ED LEPOMA

A two percent tax to be imposed on non-local residents who use RV parks and rent vacation homes in Hancock County may be dead on arrival.

At Monday's recessed meeting, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors read into the minutes a letter written to them Dec. 27 by Beth Carriere, executive director of the Hancock County Tourism Development Bureau.

Carriere told supervisors the nine-member Tourism Development Bureau board met in a workshop session last November with state Sen. Scottie Cuevas and state Rep. Dirk Dedaux. She said they discussed the need of the Bureau for additional funding, in addition to the $120,000 generated by a two percent tax now imposed on motel lodging in the county.

Carriere said Dedaux and Cuevas indicated they would sponsor the legislation as a local and private bill in the current legislative session, but they wanted the support and Longtime Waveland Public Works employee Leroy Thompson, 41, was badly burned on Monday while preparing to begin his work day.

The accident occurred about 6:50 a.m., Mayor Tommy Longo said Tuesday, and he received the call informing him of the accident at about 7 a.m.

City attorney Ronnie

Artigues said Tuesday that apparently Thompson was standing around a fire burning in a barrel in the city yard to warm up before work.

Artigues said the man must have decided to try to get the fire going a little better and used a can of gas to ignite the fire. The flame backed up into the can he was holding, Artigues said.

Longo said he'd been told that it caused the can to

Goutierez continues three-year battle against TRPOA

BY GEOFF BELCHER
News Editor

PASS CHRISTIAN — Ron Goutierez is moving.

That should be music to the ears of the members of the Timber Ridge Property Owners Association board of directors, against whom he's waged a campaign of letters and legal briefs for the better part of the past three years.

"Basically," Goutierez, 57, said, "the whole thing started over a fence."

In 1998, the POA filed suit against the 57-year-old Goutierez and his wife off 33 years, Lynn, seeking to force him to remove part of a privacy fence he erected on both sides of his property, saying that a portion of the fencing violates the restrictive covenants.

Goutierez, a semi-retired direct salesman, refused to take the fence down, contesting that it violated the covenants and going further to claim that some of the board members' own properties violated the covenants and nothing was done to them.

While researching his own claims, Goutierez says he discovered that for years, the POA has been billing some property owners for $120 a year that they shouldn't have to pay.

TRPOA President Sonny Poroyea said that most of the property owners he's spoken with think ten dollars a month is a bargain to pay for upkeep of Timber Ridge's grounds, common areas and swimming pool — and doesn't even begin to cover the annual cost of that maintenance.

"I'll be the first one to tell you that ($120 per year) is the best deal in the world," Goutierez said, "but it should be up to the person to pay. You've got people living in 33 different states paying dues who've never seen that pool."

He countersued the association, demanding to be repaid for the dues he had paid since 1995. Then he and Bay St. Louis attorney Harry B. Ward took it a step further, seeking other property owners who they felt had been unfairly billed to join a class-action lawsuit against the POA.

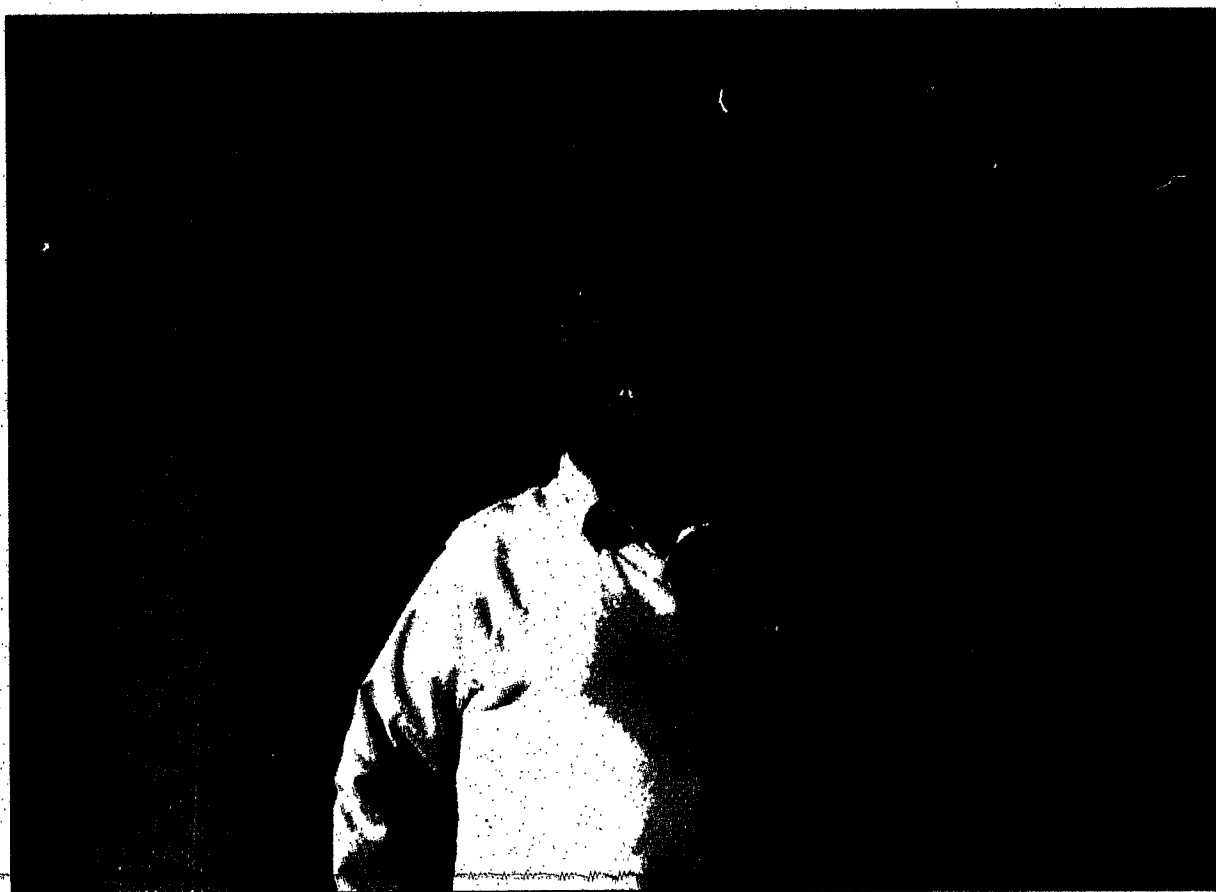

Timber Ridge Subdivision has more than 1,450 lots and more than 400 homes. Those lots, Goutierez says, fall under different covenants, dependent upon when and in what portion of the subdivision the property was purchased. Some lots have no covenants.

The three covenants that govern the lots are the 1967, 1972 and 1979 Restrictive Covenants.

"All of these covenants are equally restrictive in their overall governing of their respective areas of Timber Ridge," Goutierez said last April. "The only covenants that require property owners to pay a monetary assessment on their lots is the 1979 Restrictive Covenants, which consist of approximately 730 lots. The other two restrictive covenants make no mention of assessments or dues or any other monetary incumbrance attached to the ownership of the lots subject to those covenants."

However, Goutierez said, he believes the association has led hundreds of property owners whose lots are not part of the '79 covenants to believe that they still should pay monthly dues for the past several years.

Investigators at Mississippi

Ron Goutierez, 57, will soon be leaving the home at Timber Ridge where he and his wife Lynn have lived since 1995, but has pledged to continue his fight against the board of directors of the Timber Ridge Property Owners Association, who he feels unfairly targeted him, sued him to make him take down his fence and -- he claims -- has unfairly billed several property owners for several years to force them to pay membership dues.

Attorney General Mike Moore's office agreed with Goutierez -- to an extent -- announcing in November that they had found "anomalies" in the TRPOA's billing system, although they didn't feel those anomalies should lead to any sort of prosecution.

The POA agreed to make full disclosure to property owners, saying that it would no longer bill lot owners not under the 1979 covenants without informing them the payment isn't mandatory.

But, Poroyea said last year, "We have a number of property owners here who are telling us they want to pay the dues so they'll be able to use the common areas, the pool, the tennis court and the boat launch and, of course, we welcome that."

Poroyea said he had spoken with dozens of other property owners, and none of them have echoed Goutierez's complaints, although he and other members of the TRPOA board have provided Ward with a complete listing of all property owners so everyone can be contacted to see if they wish to join the suit.

So far, Goutierez said last week, there are still not enough people willing to climb aboard to launch the legal action.

Still, he said, he's not giving up. And even though he's moving out of Timber Ridge, he doesn't intend to give up the fight.

"It's just a matter of principle," Goutierez said. "You can't let people buffalo you and single you out."

Pass shows off stronger police, fire stations

BY ED LEPOMA
Staff Writer

Mayor Billy McDonald, Pass Christian city officials and Harrison county and state disaster chiefs gathered Wednesday to mark the completion of upgrades to the city's police and fire station.

The ceremony at the main fire station on Second Street celebrated the retrofitting of the two public building to make them more disaster resistant and safer shelters for those who might use the buildings during hurricanes and other emergency situations.

The buildings were upgraded using a $100,000 Hazardous Mitigation Grant funneled to the city through the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency.

The city also provided in-kind services combined with federal funds to improve a major drainage ditch in a subdivision that often flooded. And, under a partnership with property owners, federal funds provided 75 percent of the funds needed to elevate two homes in Pass Christian Isles.

As assessment of the city's public safety buildings in 1998 revealed the Police and Fire Department buildings were not designed to withstand winds of a Category 3 or greater storm. When Hurricane Georges threatened the Mississippi Coast and Pass Christian in September 1998, Mayor Billy McDonald said, "There was real concern that emergency operations in the city might be interrupted and expensive communication equipment damaged should the full force of the storm strike the city."

Of ever greater concerns, McDonald said, was the possibility the city might not be able to provide essential emergency services due to damage to those buildings.

The Hazardous Mitigation Grant Program provided a total of $78,000 to upgrade the two buildings, and McDonald said the city's share was only $26,000.

"Without your help, we couldn't have completed this project," McDonald told state officials.

Robert Latham Jr., a fireman for 18 years and now director of the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) congratulated McDonald and city aldermen "for their leadership and vision towards protecting the citizens of this city."

He said, although most funding requires an in-kind match of 25 percent, MEMA was working with the state legislature to split the match, thereby reducing a city's share of the cost of half of the 25 percent.

Harrison County Civil Defense Director Linda Rouse added her congratulations, saying, "Pass Christian recognized its vulnerability and took action before a disaster occurred."

Pass Christian Fire Chief Rich Marvil, who also serves as the city's Civil Defense Director in times of emergencies, said the upgrading of the police and fire department buildings will serve as a safe place where emergency personnel can come and do their jobs, and get some rest.

Richard Rose, Harrison county's newly appointed Project Impact Coordinator, said his task will be to unite cities all along the coast to make public buildings, businesses and residents more disaster resistant.

"We're all in this together. We've got responsibilities to our families and to our town," he said. The city used work crews as the in-kind match to supplement $50,000 in federal funds used to install subsurface drainage along a major ditch located immediately west of the Belle Rose Subdivision. Overflow of the canal often caused flooding in yards and streets during periods of heavy rainfall and the banks of the stream had eroded, sometimes to within a few feet of some homes.

The grant allowed the city to install subsurface drainage structures along the length of the ditch from the south boundary of the subdivision to Lang Avenue and eliminate the flooding threat to the neighborhood.

Under another program and using $320,906 in federal funds, the Hazardous Mitigation Grant funds targeted properties in Pass Christian Isles that have experienced repetitive losses due to flooding over the past several years.

The structures were all constructed at grade, on concrete foundations, making the elevation process very specialized and an expensive process.

To date, three property owners have agreed to participate in the program and construction on two is underway. Federal grant money provides 75 percent of the cost and the property owners pay 25 percent.

Hangar hang-ups continue at Stennis Airport

BY BENNIE
SHALLBETTER
Staff Writer

Yet one more time, Stennis International Airport in Kiln is the about to go through major changes. What they will be, however, is anyone's guess.

For over a year now the airport has been the scene of a battle over locations and leases between Phillips Aviation and United Aircraft Services. Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission leased office space and hangars to United Aircraft, including the hangar and office occupied by Phillips. Last March Phillips moved their business into the privately owned Project Hangar at the North end of the field. Battles continued, with United claiming that Phillips had an unfair advantage due to a lower lease rate.

Now, less than a year later, Alan Bishop, President of United Aircraft, has vacated the premises. Airport Manager Bill Cotter said on Wednesday that Bishop gave Port and Harbor an official notice letter on December 15, but then asked them to help him keep his interests operating. Cotter said Port and Harbor asked Bishop to come up with a written proposal but that he never did. Cotter also said Port and Harbor submitted a proposal to Bishop offering to take over part of the terminal building and hangar B, which would just about cut Bishop's lease obligation in half.

"But in the end he decided the fuel sales were just not there and left," said Cotter. "He never did push aircraft rental and any maintenance was done through a subcontractor ... it was always a sore point."

Federal regulations require that an FBO must provide for aircraft parking, both Av-Gas and Jet A fuel service, rental aircraft, flight instruction, maintenance, pilot supplies and a charter service. Both Phillips and United had been given a waiver allowing them to exclude the charter service.

Cotter said Port and Harbor received no official notice from Bishop after December but that he relinquished his keys on January 10 and by then had vacated the terminal building, leaving Port and Harbor to sort out an unknown future for the airport.

"I'm sorry to see things happen the way they have," Bishop said last week. "I know that everyone thinks I had a vendetta against Gene Phillips, but the truth is, I have a lot of respect for him, he has done a lot for aviation ... but the way we saw an FBO operating was definitely different ... three and a half years ago when the county approached me, I thought the airport had a lot of potential for a professionally-run operation, but there is just not enough business to support two FBO's here and the bottom line is that my fuel sales were just not enough for me to stay."

Hangar A and it's offices are now leased to AEON Enterprises Inc., an aviation technology company, new in town from Florida. The company buys, sells and leases aircraft as well as performing maintenance and restoration and presently employs seven people with plans of expansion, said owner John Rourke.

"What we would like to see is for business to flourish here and of course, peace in the valley," said Rourke.

"I want everything we had back, including hangar B, that we had for years," said Phillips on Wednesday. "We provided good service with no complaints for eleven years and we want our building back." Effective January 10, Phillips Aviation has fuel rights for the entire field, Cotter said.

Cotter said any leases solicited by Bishop would be continued for the next two months on a month to month basis and then the commission would sit down with everyone involved and try to sort out the best plan for everyone and for the airport. Cotter's office, now located in a trailer, will move into the terminal building and other offices may be leased there, Cotter said.

"As far as the other space goes, this time we will sit down face to face with everyone to decide what happens, the way

Bay P.D. working on 'community policing'

BY BENNIE
SHALLBETTER
Staff Writer

Communication between law enforcement and the community at large was the topic of discussion at a Community Policing Seminar held at the Bay St. Louis train depot on Tuesday.

The seminar was conducted by M.T. "Terry" Youngs of the Louisiana Community Policing Institute and attended by both police and community members in hopes of forming helping partnerships between the two groups. Youngs spoke to the group about the history of policing. Police used to walk a beat in their communities, said Youngs, and they knew the people in their neighborhoods. Sometimes this was good and sometimes these personal relationships interfered with law enforcement. Now, Youngs said, policing has gone the other way, with police almost completely removed from the people they are supposed to serve.

Community policing strives to go a step further than just reviving the relationship between law enforcement and the community, taking the relationship to one of mutual cooperation and mutual responsibility to overcome problems.

Youngs also stressed the "Broken Windows" theory which promotes the idea of community pride.

"If you have one broken window and it doesn't get fixed, then soon you have more, followed by a general lack of caring, and the neighborhood begins to go down," said Youngs. "What happens in a community is everyone's problem. Too often, a police officer is asked for help, and because the problem is not a criminal matter, he feels unable to offer an answer."

Youngs said that if an officer is called to a complaint, he should handle it to the best of his ability, courteously and professionally, rather than just telling someone that they can't do anything, that says that at least the police care.

Youngs presented a copy of an informational booklet from the Slidell Police Department which supplies police with information to help themselves and others. The booklet contained helpful names and numbers, including personal extensions, that officers could offer for referral to people needing help that an officer may be unable to provide. It also contained layouts of schools, motels and other public buildings for use in emergencies as well as maps and other useful information. Youngs suggested that police in the area work on compiling a similar booklet. Youngs broke the room up into four work groups. The groups participated in various problem/solution exercises and then presented their ideas to the room. Some of the problems brought up were lack of parenting skills, lack of an activity center for youth, drug use, youth seeing the selling of drugs as easy money, and truancy.

Cuevas' Quotes

Do not forget the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce January Business After Hours set for this evening from 5 to 7.

Sponsor is Bell South Mobility, located in the Zappardo's Shopping Center, Hwy. 90 at Blue Meadow Road behind Burger King, Bay St. Louis.

The Chamber's After Hours are fun times and give members and guests an opportunity to get together with friends and make new acquaintances.

We hope to see you this evening at the Chamber's After Hours.

It was good news for residents of the Standard-Dedeaux community when the board of directors of Standard-Dedeaux Water Association received approval for funding by the Rural Utilities Service for installation of a central water system.

The funding means some 800 more Hancock County residents will be on a central water system.

I have a feeling there were several residents of that area who had frozen pumps this winter because of the extreme cold weather.

Some 700 residents of the area already have been assigned water meters. There are only 135 meters still available at the $25 fee.

Persons interested in becoming a customer in the area need to make arrangements soon.

Residents interested in further information may contact Robert Seal, 255-2884; Tony Necaise, 255-7799; Gaston L. Ory Jr., 255-2677; John L. Cuevas, 255-7274; or Harrison P. Ladner, 255-4103.

Tons and tons of white mullet have fallen victim of January's extreme cold in the Jourdan River Shores area of the county.

State agencies report the kill was because of the freezes and extreme low tides which caused oxygen levels to drop below normal in the shallow canals.

It looked like one could walk across the fish, as they were so thick in some areas.

Mullets are a delicacy to many of us natives. Hopefully they will recover soon. It does not take mullet very long to mature.

This is not the first time for a freeze to cause fish kills in our area, and I am sure not the last. I am just glad I was not one of those involved in the cleanup, because it was pretty smelly.

Many were looking forward to last year's proposed Labor Day Sky Fest at the Stennis Airport, but things just did not work out.

It appears that the Sky Fest will be a reality for Labor Day weekend 2001, according to information released last week by promoters and the Port and Harbor Commission.

There will be many attractions at the three-day event, highlighted by the Thunderbirds.

The Thunderbirds have thrilled millions all over the world since their formation in 1953.

There will also be civilian performers, military displays, carnival rides, etc.

Sounds like it will be a great Labor Day weekend for Hancock County this year.

Cochran to call most of judicial patronage shots

Several appointments in the federal judiciary are apparently going to be the first choice pieces of patronage to come down to Mississippi from the newly-inaugurated Bush Administration.

And the state's senior U.S. Senator, Thad Cochran, is the Republican who will be calling most of the judicial patronage shots in Mississippi.

First off, Cochran will recommend state supreme Court Justice Mike Mills, a former Democrat and one-time moderate state legislator, for the northern federal district judgeship opening created when Judge Neal Biggers, recently took senior (semi-retired) status.

Next, Cochran, with concurrence of Sen. Trent Lott, is slated to name Pike County District Attorney Dunn Lampton of McComb, as U.S. Attorney for Mississippi's southern federal district, succeeding recently resigned Brad Pigott.

Mills, 44, as a Democratic state legislator from New Albany, had switched parties in 1994. The following year he was appointed by Gov. Kirk Fordice to fill a vacancy on the state Supreme Court. He had been elected to a full six-year term on the court in 1996.

Because of his moderate stances on social issues in the Legislature as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Mills' appointment to the high court was generally applauded by Democrats.

Some, however, later faulted him for unexpectedly joining hard-line conservatives on the Supreme Court on several issues that smacked of political partisanship and far removed from his Northeast Mississippi hard-scrabble, hill country roots.

But reaction to reports Cochran will send Mills' nomination for the northern district federal judgeship to the White House has been favorable in both Democratic and Republican political camps in Mississippi and no opposition to his confirmation is expected.

Judge Biggers, appointed by President Reagan, has been on the bench in the northern Mississippi federal district court for nearly 17 years.

To the surprise of many, Biggers turned out to be moderate-to-liberal on civil rights issues, especially the long-standing Ayers case, brought in 1974 by black plaintiffs, aimed at desegregating the state's higher education institutions.

Four years ago, Biggers issued a sweeping decision in the Ayers case, ordering the state to make major changes costing hundreds of millions of dollars at its higher education institutions in order to equalize educational opportunities between the races.

State officials, despite lengthy negotiations with black plaintiffs, have yet to reach a settlement on implementing Biggers' order.

Biggers told this reporter he intends to personally retain jurisdiction over the Ayers case even after a new district judge is appointed by President Bush. Overall, Biggers said, he intends to cut his case load by half.

Lampton, 53, as district attorney in the 14th Circuit Court the past 20 years, had won recognition as a rare local prosecutor to go after corruption and voter fraud in county political circles.

However, he is perhaps best remembered by most South Mississippians as the Republican challenger last year in an unsuccessful attempt to unseat 4th District Democratic U.S. Rep. Ronnie Shows.

Unlike former 4th District U.S. Rep. Mike Parker, Shows' immediate predecessor, Shows has no intention of trying to stall Lampton's appointment because he is a former congressional opponent.

Back in 1993, Parker, then still a Democrat, had held up Pigott's appointment as U.S. Attorney by President Clinton for over six months because Pigott had been one of his (Parker's) foes in 1988 when both ran for Congress.

Mills' elevation to the federal bench will open up a vacancy for Gov. Ronnie Musgrove to fill on the state Supreme Court. Word has it that Musgrove will name Washington County DA Frank Carlton, of Greenville, a former member of the Mississippi House of Representatives to fill the spot.

Interestingly, Carlton's daughter, Neely C. Carlton, (D-Greenville) is a member of the Mississippi Senate.

Down the road - maybe not very far - another choice piece of federal judicial patronage in the Bush administration may fall into Cochran's lap, namely a seat on the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of appeals over which Louisiana and Mississippi have been squabbling.

If the seat comes to Mississippi, it is believed that Cochran, with Lott agreeing, has Charles Pickering, presently a U.S. District court judge in Mississippi's Southern District, in mind for the job.

Pickering, until his appointment to the federal bench by the previous President George Bush, had been a longtime Republican war-horse in Mississippi, and was once president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

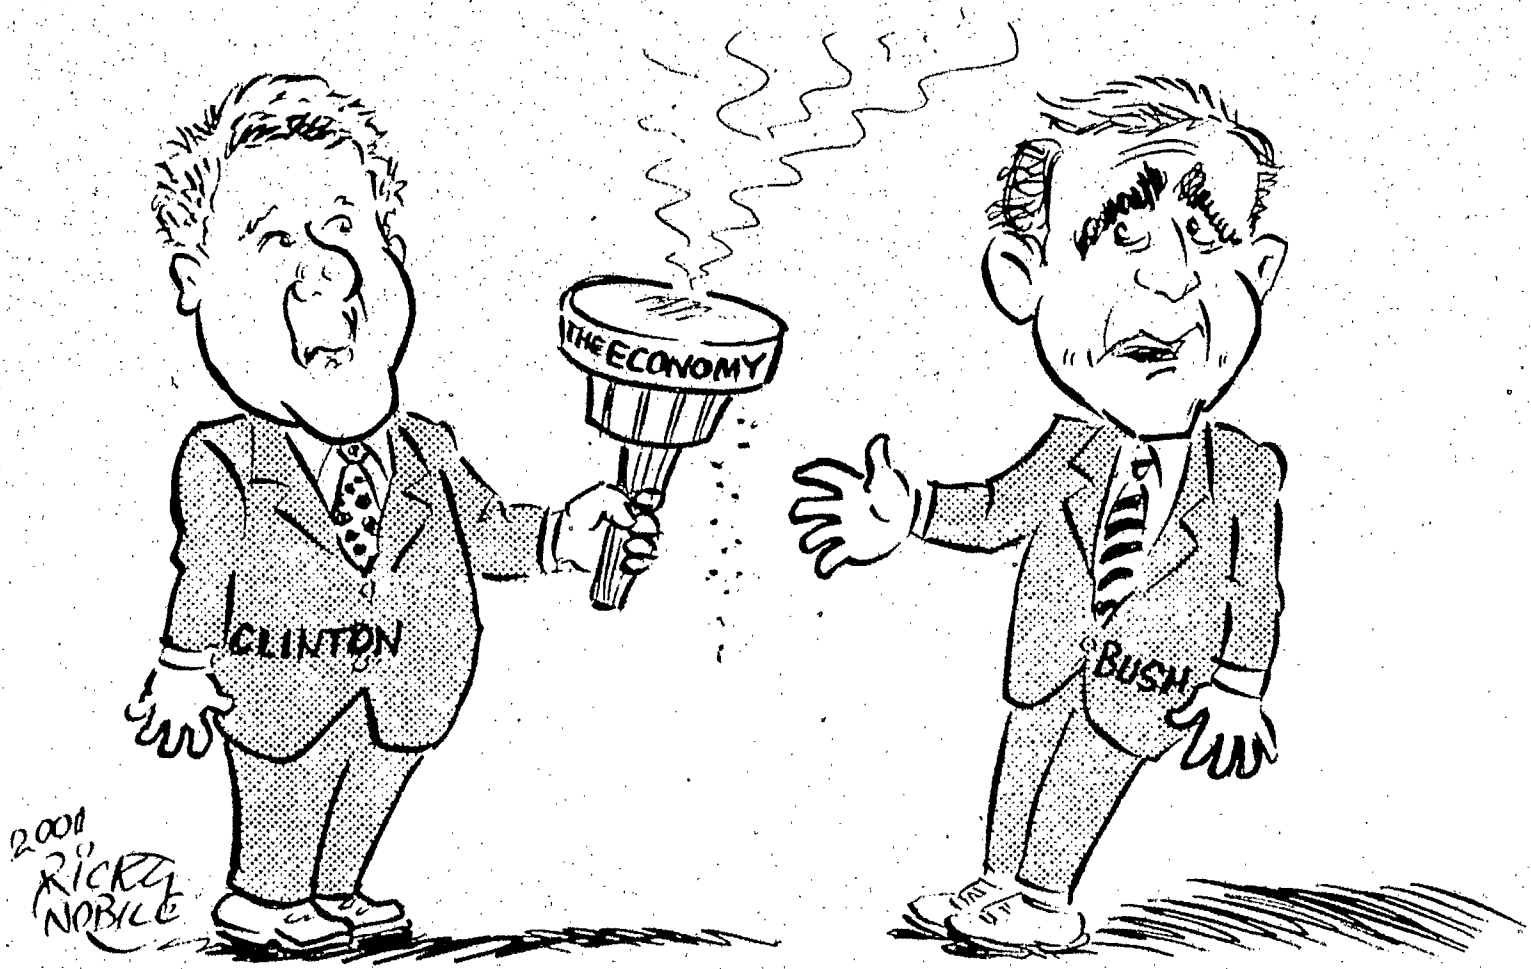

His son, Chip, is now Mississippi's Third District congressman.

USMGC honors teachers

A pinning ceremony at the University of Southern Mississippi Gulf Coast has recognized 68 Gulf Coast teachers who recently attained National Board Certification Teacher status.

USMGC and the Gulf Coast Master Teacher Mentoring Program hosted the Jan. 10 event, which drew more than 200 people to the Hardy Hall auditorium on the Gulf Park campus.

"Each of us received a letter in November telling us we had passed the national boards, but somehow it didn't seem official until the pinning ceremony," said Phyllis Hammack, an English teacher at Harrison Central High School in Gulfport.

Past recipients of the NBCT recognition were at the ceremony in November telling us we had passed the national boards, but somehow it didn't seem official until the pinning ceremony," said Phyllis Hammack, an English teacher at Harrison Central High School in Gulfport.

"This was a great way to honor area teacher accomplishments on behalf of their students and schools," said Senita Walker, director of the Gulf Coast Master Teacher Mentoring Project and, herself, a certified teacher.

Under Walker's direction, the Gulf Coast Teacher Mentoring Project provides information and support to teachers interested in National Board Certification.

The National Board teacher certification process is voluntary and requires the teacher to complete a classroom portfolio and assessment center exercise. The certification costs $2,300.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI SENATE

By State Senator
Scottie Cuevas

The third week of the 2001 session was a solid, productive one in the state's Capitol. Of course, we continue to struggle with revenue, as many of you know.

Our state is not in an economic recession, however, as we have pointed out many times, we're still growing in Mississippi. We're just not growing as fast as we have in recent years, and our economy is not living up to the projections past legislators based their projections on.

That has put us in a budget crunch, but it's something we will have to live with and work through.

This past week we took a long hard look at natural and propane gas prices, because that's something that has seriously affected many of our citizens, especially the elderly and those living on fixed incomes.

These soaring prices also adversely affect our manufacturers, who are having to adjust to increased prices to run their businesses.

We in the Legislature have heard from citizens across the state as to the soaring bills they are receiving. The Public Utilities Committee held a hearing Tuesday with the state's Public Service Commission and officers of various fuel vendors.

We in the Senate wanted to talk with gas suppliers and regulators to try and understand why these prices have soared and what we, as leaders of the state, might do to help alleviate some of the pain.

We found out there's not much we can do about it.

Several years ago the federal government deregulated natural gas prices, but gas prices remained low.

But there was not much exploration and drilling for new gas supplies going on.

Now with the severely cold winter we've been experiencing in our state demand for natural gas jumped significantly.

One thing we did do was provide, through the Public Service Commission, that natural gas providers not turn off service to consumers who are having trouble paying their bills as long as those customers are making a good-faith effort to pay.

Gas and propane company officials said the best thing a strapped customer can do is to contact them as early as possible so that a schedule of payment can be worked out. Do not wait until the service man is at the door to try and make arrangements.

Also, try to conserve as much as possible. Wear additional clothing and turn your heat down at night. Lower the temperature setting on gas water heaters.

Also make sure your doors and windows are secure and don't leak cold air.

With the first major deadline of the year passing - the deadline to introduce bills - we've really buckled down in committee work. A major event during the week was the agreement by the Senate's Veteran's and Military Affairs Committee to approve the nomination of Brig. Gen. James Lipscomb, III, as Adjutant General of the Air and Army National Guard.

Brig. Gen. Lipscomb reported during his hearing that morale in the Guard is up, and the Guard's retention rate appears to be improving. He also reported that a detachment slated to leave soon for peacekeeping duties in Bosnia is well prepared and ready to take up their duties.

We also approved a bill, Senate Bill 2424. I was the principal author of this bill, which will help some of our hospitals, especially small, rural ones, by allowing them to draw more money from the federal government for Medicare reimbursement.

So things have gotten off to a good start, and we continue to work toward more progress for the state and her people.

I'm pleased to be able to continue to represent your interests and look forward to hearing from you on matters that interest you.

Sen. Cuevas may be reached in Jackson at 601-359-3770 or by writing to P.O. Box 1018, Jackson, MS 39215.

Wildcats take division lead with win over GC Bulldogs

Pearl River Community College's Wildcats took sole possession of the top spot in the South Division men's basketball derby with a hard-fought 58-56 victory over Mississippi Gulf Coast Monday in the Wertzell Center.

The match-up was a battle of the division's unbeaten with PRCC prevailing to improve to 6-0 in league play and 14-3 overall. The Bulldogs dropped to 5-1 and 14-4.

In the women's game, the Lady Wildcats snapped a five-game losing streak with a 68-63 victory and evened their division record at 3-3, while improving to 10-7 overall. Gulf Coast's women dropped to 1-5 and 11-5.

In the men's game, the Bulldogs held the Wildcats to only one point a free throw by James Singleton of Chicago in the early going to lead 13-7 seven minutes into the game, then built their lead to as much as 15 points twice in the first half.

Forward Ernest Nix of Houma, La., sank a bucket at the 4:05 mark to kick off a 13-0 Wildcat run that cut the Bulldogs' lead to 27-25 at the intermission. Hattiesburg sophomore Taboris Lindsey scored 13 of his 23 points in the first half, including six in the final three minutes before intermission.

Lindsey opened the second-half scoring with one of his three treys of the game to tie the Wildcats up 28-27, then point guard Steward, Nix's prep teammate at Ellender High School in Houma, sank back-to-back treys to push PRCC's lead to 34-27. Over the next four minutes, Steward would score eight more points, including two more three pointers, to boost the Wildcats' lead to nine.

Gulf Coast fought back to tie it up at 43-43, 45-45, and 54-54. Bulldog forward Willie Breland sank a trey with 2:25 left to give the Bulldogs a short-lived 53-51 edge, then Steward answered with his fifth and final three pointer of the night, then scored the Wildcats' final four points of the game.

Wildcat coach Richard Mathis was elated with the win. "This was a good road win for us against a very good basketball team," Mathis said. "But we haven't won anything yet. We still have six division games left."

"This thing (division race) isn't over," Mathis said. "The Bulldogs will be back. Coach (Bob) Weathers will rally his guys. They're still a reckoning force in the division."

In women's action, PRCC grabbed a short-lived 13-12 lead at the 12:10 mark of the first half, then fought back to regain a 20-19 edge with 3:20 left off a bucket by Jessica Pucheu of Hancock County. Mindy Ladner, another Hancock product, added back-to-back buckets to put PRCC up by five. Gulf Coast fought back to tie it at 24-24, but the Lady Wildcats led 27-24 at the intermission.

North Forrest freshman point Dee Flenory scored six of her game and career-high 19 points in the first six minutes of the second half and capped a 14-4 run to push the Lady Wildcats to a 41-30 lead. The Lady Bulldogs answered with a 23-11 run to take a 53-51 edge, but Pucheu's three-point play put PRCC back on top.

Gulf Coast managed to tie it twice during the remaining time the last at 63-63 with 42 seconds remaining, then the Lady Wildcats finished off their hosts hitting five of eight foul shots to ice the five-point victory.

Besides Flenory, who also grabbed seven rebounds and a team-high five steals, Mindy Ladner added 18 points, including a game-high 16 boards. Pucheu finished with 10, Brandi Ladner and Lori DeSilvey, both of Hancock County, seven each; Michelle Small of New Orleans five, and Millie Graves of Bassfield 2.

PRCC returns to action Thursday with a division road trip to Hinds in Utica, then hosts division rival Southwest Monday, Jan. 29, and Jones Thursday, Feb. 1. The women tip off at 6 p.m., followed by the men at 8 p.m.

Local sailors participate in Sugar Bowl Regatta

Randy SantaCruz, Gilly and Kippy Chamberlain represented Bay-Waveland Yacht Club in the annual Race of Champions at New Orleans Yacht Club during the new year festivities.

The wind was NNW and fluky at about 8-12 mph with temperatures in the upper 30s.

PCYC's John Dane won the series in tight competition with several other clubs. BWYC's team finished 5-5-1-4 in the four races of the nine-boat series for a fifth place finish real close to Brock Schmidt (GYC) who won the Mallory trophy in 2000 and Benz Paget (NOYC) who won the Mallory trophy in 1999.

The Mallory trophy is won in the US Sailing national men's championship each year.

Three Bay-Waveland junior sailors competed in the High School Sugar Bowl Regatta Jan. 6 and 7 at Southern Yacht Club.

Melissa Chapoton skippered

the "A" Division boat for the combined Our Lady Academy/St. Stanislaus sailing team. Her brother, John Chapoton, crewed the "B" Division boat.

Racing against them was Andrew Eagan, sailing the "A" boat for Brother Martin High School in New Orleans.

Seven teams competed in a like number of races, sailing 420's without spinnakers and traps. The rescheduled regatta was sailed in 5 to 10 knots of wind with mild temperatures. These conditions were far better than the freezing cold of the prior week.

The winning team was from Jesuit High School in New Orleans, and OLA/Stanislaus finished fifth overall.

The next sailing event at the club will be Saturday, Jan. 27, the SuperBowl Sunfish Regatta with 420's added this year due to increasing junior participation.

On Saturday, January 27, the Hancock Hawks basketball program will host its fourth annual Alumni Day. Under the motto of "Hawk Today, Hawk Tomorrow, Hawk Forever," the Hancock basketball program honors their alumni players with the day of basketball.

The annual event is a day full of reminiscing, games, food, and fun. Pee Wee games lead the day off at 8am followed by a social gathering with refreshments at 12:30pm. Alumni games and contests start at 1pm followed by a showing of 1966 team videos featuring late Hawk alumnus and NBA great Wendall Ladner at 2pm. More alumni games and contests resume at 2:30pm followed by alumni introductions at 5:30pm. A hospitality dinner for the alumni and spouses starts at 6pm followed by a the varsity girls basketball game against Pass Christian at 6:30pm. The varsity boys game at 8pm will conclude the day's festivities.

It is also an opportunity for the Hancock Hawk basketball alumni to see how they can help the current Hawks and Lady Hawks basketball program. The alumni can learn of ways they can help the program prosper and continue the traditions of Hawks basketball that were set in place starting in 1959.

The alumni can gather information about joining the Hawks' Alumni Association of Hardwood Club. They can mingle and meet with the current players. The alumni can also find out more information on how to help the current program with projects and sponsorships.

Basketball alumni and their spouse will be admitted into the game free. So, to all Hancock basketball alumni near and far, high and low, come on out and see what Alumni Day has in store for you. And don't forget, "Hawk Today, Hawk Tomorrow, Hawk Forever!"

SSC records win #20 with 71-41 decision over PRC

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II
Staff Writer

The St. Stanislaus Rock-chaws basketball team won its 20th game of the season with a 71-41 win over the visiting Pearl River Central Blue Devils on Tuesday, January 23.

The Rocks charged out of the gate to a 7-0 lead before PRC called a timeout. The Blue Devils then went on an 8-0 run to lead 8-7 with about four minutes remaining in the first period.

The Rocks took control of the game and didn't let go as they went into intermission with a 33-24 lead.

Brandon Arcement and Mike Ryan each hit three-pointers in the third period to help the Rocks increase their lead to 48-28; while holding the Blue Devils to just four points in the period.

Lee Howard led the Rocks with 19 points followed by Mike Ryan with 16.

Grady Willis and Brandon Arcement each added 10 points in the win. The leading scorer for PRC was Cory Tatum with nine points.

SSC head coach Jay Ladner commented, "We got off to a slow start tonight and that was due, in part, to the game plan of PRC. They played a methodical game and slowed the tempo down which is not good for us. I thought our team play was outstanding. Grady Willis did a very good job of being unselfish. Lee Howard is playing his best basketball of the year right now."

With the win the Rocks improve to 20-7 overall and 7-2 in the division.

This is the seventh time in the last eight years that the Rocks have recorded 20 wins or more.

SSC takes to the road on Friday, January 26, to play the Oak Grove Warriors in a division contest.

Ravens plan to be all business

BY DAVID GINSBURG

AP Sports Writer

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — All those knee operations, smashed fingers and jarring collisions are paying off for Baltimore defensive tackle Tony Siragusa, who after 11 years in the NFL will play in his first Super Bowl.

His sense of humor ought to be a big attraction on media day next week, and there's a very good chance the 350-pound "Goose" will sample the pasta at several Italian restaurants in Tampa. But this is a business trip, and the immediate task for him and his teammates is to beat the New York Giants on Jan. 28.

"If you're lucky, you get a shot at being world champions. Maybe only one," Siragusa said. "Dan Marino went to the Super Bowl the second year he was in the league and never went back. You've got to grasp the moment when you can."

Fact: Franchises making their first trip to the Super Bowl are 8-16. Call it "The Happy to Be Here Phenomenon," and the 1998 Atlanta Falcons are a perfect case study.

The Falcons upset the heavily favored Minnesota Vikings on the road in the NFC championship, then got beat handily by Denver in their initial Super Bowl appearance. The Falcons subsequently failed to reach .500 in each of the next two seasons.

Unlike Siragusa, Ravens cornerback Chris McAlister is in the Super Bowl in only his second season. But he knows it would be foolish to think that his presence in the game will become an annual event.

As far as he's concerned, this could be his only shot at obtaining the one bit of jewelry that every pro football player covets.

"It's not a guarantee I can ever get back to the Super Bowl," McAlister said. "The to Tampa just to see friends or walk through a couple of amusement parks.

"You have to realize what you're going to Tampa for. Disney World is 45 minutes away, you've got Busch Gardens ... there are a lot of things that can distract your attention," he said. "But the main focus is to win a football game, and you cannot lose sight of that."

No matter what happens in the Super Bowl, the Ravens (15-4) have already succeeded beyond their most optimistic expectations. Actually, the season became one for the books when they made the playoffs for the first time after going 24-39-1 since owner Art Modell moved the franchise from Cleveland in 1996.

If the Ravens were going to rest on their laurels, it could have happened against Denver in the wild-card game, or even more likely, last week in the AFC championship game against the Oakland Raiders, according to coach Brian Billick.

"Having done what we did to get to Oakland — winning on the road in Tennessee — there could have a sense of, 'Well, we got to the championship game, win or lose, what the heck. We had a great year.' And it would have been a good year had we lost," Billick said. "But not the year we're capable of having."

Or, as cornerback Duane Starks put it, "It makes no sense to get to the playoffs if you're not going to play in the Super Bowl."

And it makes no sense to play in the Super Bowl if you're not going to win it."

Duane Starks picked off two passes in the Ravens' win over Oakland January 14.

way football is, our team is not going to stand intact next year; with free agency, you have to expect some people to be gone. I want to make the most of this opportunity and walk away with a big ring with 35 diamonds on it."

If there's anyone on the Ravens who doesn't think that way, he'd better not let tight end Shannon Sharpe know about it. Sharpe, who has already played in two Super Bowls, isn't going

NEW YORK GIANTS

Super Bowl all about defense

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — It's the immovable force vs. the immovable force, defensive powers that started the season as long shots. Yet this Super Bowl between the New York Giants and the Baltimore Ravens is hardly unlikely.

The key is the system that benefited both teams.

The Giants were 7-9 in 1999, 14-4 this season. The Ravens went from 8-8 to 15-4. Last year's contestants were the St. Louis Rams, who improved from 4-12 to 16-3, and the Tennessee Titans, who went from 8-8 to 16-4.

"No, I hardly expected this," says Ernie Accorsi, the Giants' general manager. "I thought we'd contend for a playoff spot. But this is the salary cap."

"There's nothing left of the old system. There's very little distance between the good teams and the average ones. A break one way or the other and you're up or down."

So, look at this game as a classic defensive struggle, fit for the 1930s, when scoreless ties or finals of 3-0 were not so rare.

The Ravens set a record this season for fewest points allowed, 165 in 16 games, while yielding the fewest yards rushing in the NFL and second-fewest overall. The Giants were second against the run and fifth overall on defense.

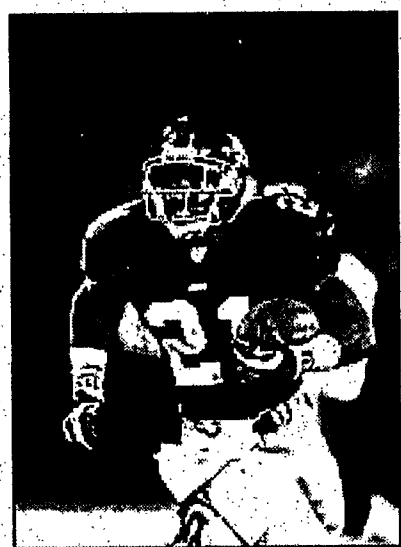

The Giants arrived in Tampa on Sunday afternoon.

"We were about to land and Jesse Armstead kicked the back of my seat and said, 'Do you believe we're at the Super Bowl,'" defensive end Michael Strahan said.

If defense is the overall theme, give the early part of Super Bowl week to Ray Lewis of the Ravens and Kerry Collins of the Giants, two players whose marvelous seasons contrast with troubled pasts.

Lewis' troubles were far more serious: a charge of double murder lodged against him in the stabbing of two men outside an Atlanta night club following last year's Super Bowl. He eventually pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice and received probation from the courts and a $250,000 fine from the NFL. Lewis said that gave him incentive for this season, when he was voted NFL Defensive Player of the Year, a middle linebacker whose style of play was in the Dick Butkus-Ray Nitschke mold.

Tiki Barber rushed for 1,006 yards this season. (NFLP)

"After I fought for my life in Atlanta, everyone said, 'He might not be the same again. He might not get 100 tackles. Ray Lewis will never be the player he was.' Well, they were absolutely correct," Lewis said. "I'm not the same player. I'm better."

While Ravens coach Brian Billick calls the charges "a non-issue," Lewis faces another test on media day on Tuesday.

Then, surrounded by hundreds of interrogators, he will be bombarded by questions about the Atlanta case. Even for an athlete who has been well coached and dealing with a far less incendiary topic, these mass-interview sessions can be troubling.

Collins, the Giants' quarterback, led the Carolina Panthers to the NFC championship game in 1996, the second year in the NFL for both player and team. But his career spiraled downward, a trip fueled by alcohol.

He was accused of making a racist remark to a teammate, asked out of Carolina in 1998 and was photographed walking down a New Orleans street puffing on a cigar after being released from jail on a drunk-driving charge.

After being released by the Panthers, he spent a half-season in New Orleans, then signed with the Giants at the beginning of the 1999 season for $16.9 million over four years.

This was his comeback season — his 3,610 yards passing were the third-best in team history, and he threw for 381 yards and five touchdowns in the 41-0 win over Minnesota in the NFC championship game.

He makes his apologies Monday evening. Then, say Collins and coach Jim Fassel, he will talk only about football.

What about football? The Ravens, who moved to Baltimore from Cleveland in 1996, are here despite a stretch in October when they went five games without scoring a touchdown. Trent Dilfer took over at quarterback for Tony Banks for the ninth game, a 9-6 loss to Pittsburgh, and now has won 10 straight.

Dilfer is returning to Tampa, where he played for six years with the Bucs.

The Giants are returning to the city of their last Super Bowl victory, a 20-19 thriller over Buffalo 10 years ago.

This team probably isn't as good as that one, and certainly not as good as the one that won the Giants' first Super Bowl in 1957.

But nobody is these days. As Wellington Mara, the Giants' 84-year-old owner, put it after the win over Minnesota:

"We were the worst team to get home field in the playoffs. We were the worst team to get to a championship game. Now we'll be the worst team ever to win a Super Bowl."

Another owner might be saying the same thing next season.

Super Bowl XXXV: A Fierce Matchup

SB 35 is going to be a fierce, intense, rough, tough struggle between two hot streaking teams. SB 35 is about 1) the unpredictability of the NFL; 2) it's about the toughest defenses in the history of the game; and 3) it's about redemption. It also is rich with other stories.

UNPREDICTABILITY

• Unpredictability; there's never been a Super Bowl considered this evenly matched. Bill Walsh (3 SB titles) calls it a "total tossup."

• Unpredictability has helped make NFL the #1 sport: Giants, picked to finish last, win 7 straight to reach Super Bowl; Ravens also a surprise Super Bowl team after winning 10 straight, including two in row in the playoffs as underdogs on the road. Unpredictability of SB 35; a Super Bowl rarity, this game considered by media a "pick 'em" game; no clear favorite.

TOUGH DEFENSES

Both defenses bring to mind the great defensive units in NFL history - '85

Bears, Steel Curtain, Doomsday, Purple People Eaters, Fearsome Foursome, LT's - Giants. Tough Defenses: SB 34 celebrated the Rams, one of the all-time great offenses; this year's Super Bowl is about two great defenses, including one record-setting unit (Baltimore) that is being talked about as one of the all-time best. Intensely fierce defensive struggles such as predicted for SB 35 rank among the most memorable games in NFL History - where any one play can mean the difference and where every play counts:

'99 NFC Championship Game (Rams 11, Bucs 6 on Ricky Proehl TD catch)

* '90 NFC Championship Game (Giants 15, 49ers 13 on Matt Bahr FG)

* '80 AFC Divisional Playoff (Raiders 14, Browns 12 Sipe throws INT in end zone)

* '75 NFC Divisional Playoffs (Cowboys 17, Vikings 14 Staubach's "Hail Mary")

* Super Bowl V11 (Dolphins 14, Redskins 7 to complete "Perfect Season" despite Garo Yepremian "pass")

'72 AFC Divisional Playoffs (Steelers 13, Raiders 7 "Immaculate Reception")

Tax -- Supers

direction of the Board of Supervisors.

"I thought it was a good idea," Carriere said later. She explained to supervisors in the letter: "This would not tax local citizens within Hancock County and the RV parks and the vacation homes have been receiving the benefits of our advertising and sales efforts, but (are) not required to contribute."

Carriere said a rough estimate is the tax would bring in another $40,000 yearly.

Monday, supervisors moved to have Carriere's letter entered into the official minutes of the meeting, but made no further comment.

Contacted later, board President Rocky Pullman said the inaction was not a sign of approval or disapproval of Carriere's proposal. He said the board might take action on the plan at its February meeting, but took no action because District 3 Supervisor Lisa Coward was absent, recovering from surgery.

"But, I think it is the feeling of the board at this time, they do not want to impose any additional taxes on anyone," said Pullman. "But, we'll see."

The Tourism Development Bureau is facing another deadline. The local and private bill that created the agency automatically expires unless supervisors give the county's legislative delegation a resolution supporting the bureau's life for another year. If not, the agency would be dissolved and the tax lifted by July 1, the end of the state's fiscal year.

Pullman said he was aware of that approaching deadline. "We'll discuss that, and do what is best for the county," said Pullman. He said he expected the board "to speak as a group and address the issue" in its

Feb. 5 meeting.

Contacted in Jackson, Dedeaux said he and Cuevas did meet and discussed the tax proposal with the Tourism Development board, but he preferred not to comment on the Carriere proposal, since he had seen nothing in writing.

But, he said, supervisors need to act by mid-February if they plan to support legislation that would extend the life of the Tourism Development Bureau, so the bill would have time enough to run through the legislative process.

In other business, supervisors agreed to a request by Tax Assessor/Collector Jimmie Ladner to obtain estimates on what it would cost to make the front door to his office on Main Street handicapped-accessible. He told supervisors counters have been lowered to accommodate people in wheelchairs, but the front door is a problem for the handicapped and elderly.

Supervisors received four bids on installing a new box culvert and sheet pilings on a failing portion of North Beach Boulevard.

Twin L Construction of Pass Christian submitted the apparent low bid of $178,784.

After some wrangling over details, supervisors approved Sheriff Steve Garber's plans to increase patrols in the vast buffer zone surrounding the Stennis Space Center.

At the request of supervisors, NASA upped its support to the patrol from $25,000 to $75,000 per year, and Garber will use most of the funds to provide patrol cars and to hire two full-time deputies to patrol 12 hours a day, seven days a week year round.

Pullman and District 4 Supervisor Steve Seymour told Garber's chief administrative officer Ron Cuevas they hoped

Hancock High SADD Chapter donates to HMC Foundation

Hancock High School SADD Chapter recently donated $400 to the Hancock Medical Center Foundation. The dollars were raised through the payment of club dues. Those on hand for the donation presentation included, from left, SADD co-sponsors Judy Purvis and Janet Nash, SADD vice-president Brooke Lee, SADD president Heather Simpson, HMC director of nursing Angie Gambino, HMC-Foundation member Ellis Cuevas, and Hancock High School nurse Ella Mae Penton.

the deputies would beef up efforts to stop people from dumping trash on White's Road and other roads within the buffer zone.

After hearing complaints from a homeowner, supervisors instructed the county engineer to confer with Waveland Public Works officials and look into reports of a drainage problem on the Waveland-Kiln Cutoff Road in the vicinity of Laurel Street.

Seymour also gained board approval for the county engineer to look into resurfacing the walking track fronting U.S. Hwy. 90 and Drinkwater Boulevard.

Seymour said people using the track in front of Hancock Medical Center have fallen because of cracks in the cement. If the cost estimate is above $10,000, the project will have to be put out to public bid.

Supervisors authorized Sue Chamberlain, the Chamber of Commerce's Smart Growth Manager, to file application for a $300,000 grant so Hancock County and Bay St. Louis can establish a federally-funded Project Impact Program aimed at making communities more resistant to hurricanes and other disasters.

Death -- Mark Mitchell

Department Chief Investigator Bob Lambert said on Monday that the investigation is still open and still being handled as a hit-and-run until evidence or witnesses are discovered that would take the investigation in another direction.

"As of now, we don't have that," said Lambert. "Any and all leads will be investigated but we still feel it was a hit-and-run accident."

Lambert said yesterday the case has now been turned over to District Attorney Cono Caranna's office for review and recommendations.

Mitchell held a candlelight vigil on Tuesday at the scene of her son's death on Lakeshore Rd. About 30 friends and family attended the event on the dark road. Friends of the victim formed a circle of their own.

A patrol from the sheriff's department was also present. Lambert said he arranged the patrol to make sure no one else gets hurt out there, especially since there was the possibility of fog or bad weather. "It was a foggy, rainy night that night, too (the night of the accident)," said Lambert.

Mitchell said she wants her son to be remembered for what he was -- a good, intelligent, responsible kid. "He wanted to be an attorney ... all his friends here loved him and couldn't understand why this happened to such a good person," said Mitchell. "When his grandmother heard, she cried, 'No, not the good one,' ... that's how everyone who knew him felt about him ... If the people who were harassing him got to know him, they would have felt that way too."

DMR schedules free boat safety classes for 2001

The Department of Marine Resources' (DMR) Boat and Water Safety class schedule for January through March 2001 is now available.

Classes are free and open to the public and all age groups. Since the program's inception in March, the DMR has conducted 75 boat and water safety classes and certified more than 1,200 students.

The DMR has also delivered more than 20 boat and water safety presentations to elementary schools in the three coastal counties.

In order to operate a boat or personal watercraft in Mississippi, those born after June 30, 1980 are required to successfully complete an approved boating safety course and to have a certificate of satisfactory completion in their possession while in operation of the motorboat.

In Mississippi, it is against the law for anyone under the age of 12 to operate a motorboat or personal watercraft unless they possess a certificate and are accompanied by a parent, guardian or other person who is at least 21 years of age.

To help reduce the risk of a potential accident, the DMR encourages everyone to enroll in a certified boat and water safety course. The DMR Marine Patrol-sponsored courses have been designed to effectively introduce topics such as boater registration, navigation rules, trailering, first aid response and weather watch into a comprehensive one-day class.

The classes are taught locally with many convenient locations. For more information or to register for classes, call Lt. Frank Wescovich, Boat and Water Safety Coordinator, (228) 435-1332 or (228) 432-2820.

The Mississippi Department of Marine Resources is dedicated to enhancing, protecting and conserving marine interests of the State by managing all marine life, public trust wetlands, adjacent uplands and waterfront areas to provide for the optimal commercial, recreational, educational and economic uses of these resources consistent with environmental concerns and social changes.

St. Paul Carnival Association crowns king and queen

St. Paul Carnival Association of Pass Christian has announced the selection of the 2001 royalty. King Christian LXXI is Kevin W. Gallagher. His queen is Yvette Reid Allen.

Gallagher, a DeLisle native is married to the former Diane Matkin. They are the parents of two sons, Tyler and Andrew. He is a graduate of Pass Christian High School and Jeff Davis Junior College.

Gallagher is a safety/health environmental technician with the Dupont Corporation. He was Grand Duke in 1996 and is a member of St. Paul Carnival Association.

He has participated in the St. Paul Carnival parade for 26 years, where he has won numerous awards for float competition. He is the son of John and Betty Jones Gallagher of DeLisle.

Yvette Reid Allen, will reign as Queen Christiana 2001. A lifelong Pass Christian resident, she is married to David Allen. They are the parents of a daughter, Stephanie, and a son, Jonathan who are both students at St. Paul School.

Allen attended St. Paul School and is a graduate of Long Beach High School. She is a member of St. Paul Parish, St. Paul Carnival Association and serves on the St. Paul School Board. She was Grand Duchess in 1986.

Credit union moves to new Bay location

James L. "Sandy" Rogers, president and CEO of the Gulf Coast Community Federal Credit Union, announced the relocation of the credit union's Bay St. Louis branch office. The new branch is located at 1060C Hwy. 90.

"We are really excited about this opportunity to provide better, more convenient service to our Hancock County members," said Rogers, noting that the new location includes drive-up service and additional parking spaces as well as an ATM.

"We had numerous requests for additional parking and drive-up service at our previous location, and the new facility enables us to offer these conveniences."

The Gulf Coast Community Federal Credit Union also has two branches in Gulfport, including its new Orange Grove facility on Hwy. 49 just south of O'Neal Road, and one in Biloxi.

Relocating the Bay St. Louis branch to a more accessible facility is part of the credit union's ongoing evaluation of its branch operations following the institution's conversion to a community charter in July 1999.

As a part of this process, branches that could not accommodate drive-up service, adequate parking, and/or an ATM, and were therefore convenient to a relatively small number of members, were closed in favor of more accessible locations.

"Because of our community charter, we have a commitment to serve the broadest segment of our membership," explained Rogers.

The Gulf Coast Community Federal Credit Union has a community charter allowing it to serve anyone who lives, works or worships in Harrison or Hancock County.

He was graduated from University of Southwestern Louisiana and is a member of the Wright Hancock County

Casinos announce new AirTran agreement

Beau Rivage and Grand Casinos have entered into a new joint marketing agreement to ensure AirTran Airways' continued success on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

The new contract, effective January 1, 2001, creates an equal partnership between the two casinos. Service on AirTran will be uninterrupted as a result of this agreement.

AirTran Airways, a low-cost air carrier, provides commercial non-stop scheduled jet service between Gulfport/Biloxi Regional Airport and five major southeast cities.

AirTran Airways also offers one-stop service through its Atlanta hub to 31 cities throughout the East including New York, Boston, Chicago and Washington, D.C.

The primary markets benefiting by this agreement include Ft. Lauderdale, Tampa, Dallas, Houston and Atlanta, as well as the Gulf Coast cities.

Customers in these areas enjoy ease in booking travel arrangements and competitive pricing among airlines.

Grand Casinos and Beau Rivage are partnering with Casino Airlink, a tour operator and charter service based out of Clearwater, Florida.

Casino Airlink along with MGM MIRAGE Vacations, a tour operator specializing in vacation packages for MGM MIRAGE properties, will coordinate cooperative reservations, packaging and marketing for AirTran in the feeder markets.

In addition to the current markets being serviced, Casino Airlink will help develop other markets.

Jeff Dahl, president of Beau Rivage, commented on the joint venture: "We look forward to working together with Grand Casinos and hope this is the beginning of many more successful endeavors."

He added, "The community support demonstrated by so many in ensuring AirTran's continued service to the Mississippi Gulf Coast is greatly appreciated."

"Since coming to the Coast in 1993, Grand has always made decisions which were necessary to insure the job security of our employees and also to meet the needs of the community," said Tom Brosig, president, Mid-South Region, Park Place Entertainment.

He added, "I am very happy that Jeff and I could find a way to make that happen in this case. I look forward to working hand in hand with Beau Rivage management and in particular Jeff Dahl to continue the positive development of the Mississippi Gulf Coast as America's premier tourist destination."

MESC recovers $2.8 million for child support

The Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC) recovered nearly $2.8 million in unpaid child support from unemployment checks last year.

MESC Executive Director Curt Thompson said $2,796,873 was intercepted from weekly unemployment checks. The amount was an increase of more than $650,000 from last year.

The deductions are from the checks of unemployment claimants who have outstanding child support court orders.

Tourism bureau awarded grant

Hancock County Tourism has been awarded a $15,386 tourism development grant for Old Town brochure, Cruisin' the Coast advertising, and advertising in the Mississippi Travel Guide, announced J.C. Burns, executive director, Mississippi Development Authority.

Applications submitted by Mississippi convention and visitors bureaus, chambers of commerce, with a designated tourism council or commission, or established tourism councils with the primary objective of promoting tourism were reviewed by a five-member Tourism Advisory Council Grants Committee.

The committee is composed of the president or their representative for the Hotel/Motel Association; Mississippi Restaurant Association; Mississippi Travel Association plus two additional members recommended by the chairman and appointed by the director of the Mississippi Development Authority.

"The matching grants program empowers local communities to partner with the state in promoting Mississippi," said Renee Ebner, grants coordinator for the tourism division.

Projects are awarded funds that must be watched on a dollar-for-dollar basis by the applicant. The next deadline for submitting grant applications will be Sept. 1.

The goal of the matching grants program is to generate increased travel into and/or within Mississippi. Projects must have a broad appeal, targeting markets beyond the local area and make an economic impact on the area through tourism promotion.

Stennis raises $313,290. for regional charities

Final tallies in Stennis Space Center's Combined Federal/United Way Campaign for 2000 far exceeded expectations. According to Judy Dauro of the Naval Meteorology and Oceanography Command at Stennis, who served as site-wide coordinator for the federal campaign, the joint effort raised $313,290. Leo Ponder, project manager for Mississippi Space Services, served as site-wide coordinator for the industrial contractors.

Organizations and charities from Hancock, Harrison and Pearl River counties in Mississippi, as well as the Greater New Orleans area, including St. Tammany and Tangipahoa parishes in Louisiana, will benefit from the contributions of Stennis employees. "This is the first year that the two programs have been combined and conducted with a unified effort," Dauro said. "The results were very positive."

Jerry Lee Lewis entertains at Magic

"The greatest piano player ever"

-Elton John

"This man doesn't play rock n' roll... He is rock n' roll."

-Bruce Springsteen

These are both quotes about one man, the original rock n' roller, Jerry Lee Lewis. Now you can see the man, the legend, playing the piano like you've never seen before only at Casino Magic Bay St. Louis, Saturday, Jan. 27 at 9 p.m. for $20, $25 and $30 in the Magic Entertainment Complex.

His accomplishments include having sold over 25,000,000 records, making over 100 nationally acclaimed albums, being one of the first inductees into the Rock n' Roll Hall of Fame, being awarded a star on Hollywood's "Walk of Fame, and others.

Born in Ferriday, La. on Sept. 29, 1935, Jerry Lee Lewis has been mastering the keys since age seven. Today the 65-year-old can still shake a leg and bang those keys, creating a raucous the late '50s and early '60s, he also recorded rock classics like Chuck Berry's "Little Queenie," The Drifters, "Save The Last Dance For Me" and Barret Strong's R&B oldie "Money (That's What I Want)".

Lewis is still on the road, performing his exciting mix of country and rock n' roll. He's survived various health problems and a long and painful battle with the IRS over back taxes.

Married since 1984 to his sixth wife, Kerrie, he lives in Nesbit, Miss., 20 miles south of Memphis. He's mellowed a bit, but when Lewis sings those great Sun oldies, it's clear he is still a powerful rock n' roll original.

Tickets may be purchased through the Casino Magic Box Office in person or by calling 1-800-5-MAGIC-5 or through any TicketMaster outlet. Must be 21 to attend.

Scots to celebrate Burns Supper Saturday

It has been over 200 years since the death of the Scottish Poet Laureate Robert Burns. During the month of January Scots all over the world celebrate the birth of the poet with a special night of celebration.

The Scottish Society of the Gulf Coast will hold its 17th annual Burns Supper Saturday, Jan. 27 at Christus Victor Lutheran Church on Hwy. 90 in Ocean Springs at 7:15 p.m.

A full three-course meal will be served by Broomes Catering Service. Traditional toasts will be given, and the Haggis will be piped in with the accompaniment of bagpipers.

The Haggis is a traditional dish served with turnips to remind Scots of the frugal times in which Burns wrote his poems. Special music has been composed for the occasion and Scottish songs will be presented as part of our program.

"We can promise you a completely different evening. Gentlemen will wear their kilts (if they have them) otherwise suits for our male guests and dresses or long skirts for the ladies. It is permissible to bring liquid refreshments of choice. Set-ups will be available," said Joan Wilson, president of the Scottish Society.

For information, contact Wilson, and tickets are available by calling the treasurer at 388-4210.
